

University of Florida Audiology Announces New Faculty

The Speech, Language, and Hearing Sciences program at the University of Florida is pleased to announce two new additions to our faculty in audiology.

Jill Raney, Ph.D.

Dr. Raney will be joining us as a Clinical Associate Professor and Director of Audiology. She has a PhD from the University of Florida, where she explored the perception of complex auditory stimuli. Dr. Raney also holds a Master's degree in Audiology from the University of Massachusetts, and has extensive experience working as a clinical audiologist. Dr. Raney comes to us from the University of Connecticut, where she has been a faculty member.

Krista Fitzgerald, Au.D.

Dr. Fitzgerald will be joining us as a Clinical Assistant Professor and Coordinator of Clinical Education for the Doctorate in Audiology program. She has an AuD from the University of Connecticut, and a Certificate of Clinical Competence from the American Speech-Language-Hearing Association. She has been working as a team leader in an intraoperative neuromonitoring group in Southern New England. She also has experience teaching courses in vestibular pathology and electrophysiology.

For more information on our newly restructured AuD and PhD programs, please contact me, Susan Nittrouer at snittrouer@php.ufl.edu.